Bitcoin and Ethereum marked prices were tightly consistent across Binance, Bybit, OKX, Bitget, and Gate, all agreeing within 0.1% of each other. Binance led overall volume with $5.5 billion in Bitcoin perpetuals and $4.8 billion in Ethereum, while Bybit and OKX each commanded 1.4–1.8 billion in Bitcoin volume respectively.

02 · POSITIONING

How traders were leaning

Funding shows which side is paying to hold its position (positive = longs pay shorts). Open interest is how much money is in open bets; its change over the day shows money coming in or out. Long/short is how many accounts lean each way. Top L/S is the ratio among the largest traders. Taker B/S is the buy-to-sell ratio of market orders.

Funding, open interest and mark price are point-in-time (as of 23:00 UTC), not daily figures.

Funding rates stood elevated at 10.95% annualized (Binance), signaling sustained costs for traders holding bullish positions. On Binance, Bitcoin's long/short ratio of 2.21 and Ethereum's of 3.39 indicated very bullish retail positioning, while the largest traders' ratio (1.70 for Bitcoin, 1.71 for Ethereum) was more moderate, suggesting institutions were less committed to the rally. Taker buy/sell ratios of 0.96 (Bitcoin) and 0.91 (Ethereum) showed aggressive selling pressure: more traders aggressively sold at market price than bought, a bearish signal despite the high long ratios. Open interest fell 2.4% on Bitcoin (Binance) and was flat on Ethereum, indicating traders were closing some positions ahead of the Fed decision. Market breadth was negative: only 45.7% of Binance perpetuals rose, meaning more contracts fell than rose.

THE THREE THAT MATTERED MOST

AI Giant Anthropic Files for IPO; Reports $16.3B Revenue, $80.7B Net Loss

Anthropic, the maker of Claude AI, filed for a Nasdaq IPO on October 26 with an S-1 registration statement disclosing $16.3 billion in first-half 2026 revenue and an $80.7 billion net loss. Crypto traders valued the company near $1.9 trillion. The filing signals continued investor appetite for AI infrastructure despite large losses and potential rate sensitivity.

Bitcoin Treasury Firms Strategy and Strive Make Record Purchases

On October 26, Strategy announced $205 million in preferred-stock buybacks while pausing Bitcoin purchases; Strive simultaneously deployed $511 million to buy Bitcoin, moving within 1,000 BTC of the second-largest corporate treasury. Combined, these reflect institutional conviction in long-term Bitcoin accumulation, though Strategy's shift to share buybacks signals caution on immediate price momentum.

India's CoinDCX Confirms $16 Million USDT Loss; Total Hack Damages Near $60 Million

On October 26, Mumbai-based exchange CoinDCX confirmed that 15.99 million USDT was drained from wallets it had retired following its $44 million hack last year. The exchange is absorbing the loss. This brings total known losses from hacks to nearly $60 million, raising questions about the adequacy of reserves and security protocols at major exchanges.

07 · GLOSSARY

CS Gorkem T
CS Tarik O

Every term used today, in plain words

Breadth — The percentage of all assets (here, Binance perpetual contracts) that gained value in a trading day. 45.7% breadth means more contracts fell than rose, showing broad selling pressure rather than a concentrated rally in a few assets.

Funding rate — An 8-hourly or hourly payment between long (bullish) and short (bearish) traders in perpetual futures. High rates, like 10.95% annualized, mean long-position holders pay shorts, which happens when the market is very bullish and demand to go long exceeds supply. When rates turn negative, shorts pay longs.

Long position — A bet that an asset's price will go up. If you buy Bitcoin expecting the price to rise, you hold a long position.

Long/short ratio — The proportion of traders betting up (long) versus down (short). A ratio of 2.21 means 2.21 long positions for every 1 short — a strongly bullish lean. Ratios above 2.0 signal very crowded bullish sentiment and can foreshadow reversals if sentiment shifts.

Mark price — The official price of a perpetual futures contract, designed to track the spot (regular market) price closely and prevent contract prices from drifting far from reality.

Open interest — The total dollar value of all currently open (unsettled) long and short positions in a futures market. Rising open interest means new traders are entering leverage; falling open interest means traders are closing positions and deleveraging.

Open interest change — The percentage increase or decrease in total open positions from one date or time to another. A -2.4% change means the total leverage in the market shrank, with traders closing more positions than opening.

Perpetual futures (perpetuals) — A leveraged (borrowed-money) futures contract with no expiration date. Traders can hold perpetuals indefinitely by paying periodic funding fees. Unlike standard futures that expire, perpetuals never settle unless the trader closes the position.

Short position — A bet that an asset's price will go down. If you borrow Bitcoin, sell it, and expect the price to fall so you can buy it back cheaper, you hold a short position.

Taker buy/sell ratio — The ratio of aggressive (market-price) buyers to aggressive (market-price) sellers over a time period. A ratio below 1 means more traders aggressively sold than bought — a bearish signal. Above 1 signals aggressive buying.

Top position ratio (largest traders) — The long/short ratio among the largest and most sophisticated traders (institutions and high-net-worth individuals), not the average retail trader. This shows how big money is positioned and is often more predictive of future moves than retail ratios.
