02 · POSITIONING

How traders were leaning

Funding shows which side is paying to hold its position (positive = longs pay shorts). Open interest is how much money is in open bets; its change over the day shows money coming in or out. Long/short is how many accounts lean each way.

Bank of Japan raises rates to 1.25%, triggering Bitcoin rally as yen weakens

The Bank of Japan hiked its policy rate by 25 basis points to 1.25% at 00:00 UTC, its highest level since 1995 and second increase this year. In a 7-2 vote, the BOJ cited risk that inflation would deviate upward beyond the 2% target. Unexpectedly, Governor Ueda signaled continued caution, causing the yen to weaken immediately. Bitcoin and Ethereum rallied 5.9% and 6.7% respectively within hours, as traders interpreted the cautious tone as less disruptive to carry trades than feared.

Every term used today, in plain words

All-time high (ATH) — The highest price an asset has ever reached; signals strong momentum and can attract new buyers.

Basis point — One hundredth of a percent (0.01%); used to measure small changes in interest rates or yields.

Carry trade — Borrowing money at a low interest rate to invest in an asset with higher expected returns; disrupted when rates rise sharply or the borrowed currency weakens.

Collateral — Assets pledged as security for a loan; if the loan is not repaid, the lender can claim the collateral.

Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) — The US federal agency that regulates futures, options, and swap markets, including derivatives tied to crypto assets.

Derivative — A financial contract whose value depends on the price of an underlying asset (like Bitcoin); includes futures, options, and perpetual swaps.

Fintech — Financial technology companies that use digital innovation to deliver banking and payment services; often at faster or lower cost than traditional banks.

Funding rate — A periodic payment between long and short traders on perpetual futures that keeps the contract price aligned with the spot price; positive rates mean longs pay shorts, indicating bullish sentiment.

Geopolitical risk — Uncertainty stemming from tensions between countries or regions; can drive demand for safe-haven assets like gold and affect energy prices.

Innovation exemption — A regulatory waiver allowing companies to pilot new products or services that don't yet fit existing rules; used by the SEC to permit tokenized asset trading.

Leverage — Borrowing to increase the size of a trade; trading with leverage amplifies both gains and losses.

Liquidation — Forced closure of a leveraged position when losses exceed the collateral posted, usually executed at an unfavorable price.

Long / Short — Long: betting that an asset's price will rise; short: betting that price will fall. The ratio compares how many traders hold long positions versus short positions.

Mark price — The reference price used to calculate funding payments and unrealized profits/losses on perpetual futures, designed to track the spot price closely.

MiCA — Markets in Crypto Assets Regulation, the EU's comprehensive framework for regulating crypto service providers and asset offerings; comes into full effect October 2023.

Open interest — The total value of all open positions (longs and shorts combined) in a futures market; rising open interest can signal growing leverage or strengthening bullish sentiment.

Open-interest change — The increase or decrease in total open positions over a time period; indicates whether traders are adding or reducing leveraged exposure.

Perpetual futures — Derivatives contracts with no expiration date that track the spot price of an asset, allowing leveraged trading 24/7; they settle payments periodically via the funding rate.

Regulation Clarity for Digital Assets Act (CLARITY Act) — A US Senate bill that would have assigned clear regulatory roles for crypto to the SEC, CFTC, and banking agencies; rejected by the Senate on September 16, 2026.

Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) — The US federal agency that regulates stock markets and securities; increasingly involved in setting rules for tokenized assets and crypto trading platforms.

Spot price — The current market price for immediate settlement of an asset, as opposed to the futures price for delivery in the future.

Tokenization / Tokenized assets — Representing real-world assets (stocks, bonds, currencies, commodities) as digital tokens on a blockchain, enabling 24/7 trading and settlement.

Treasury (US) — The US federal government department managing the country's finances, taxes, and foreign currency sanctions; includes OFAC, which enforces financial restrictions.

Yen carry — A carry trade involving borrowing Japanese yen at low rates to invest in higher-yielding assets; unwinding accelerates when the yen strengthens or rates rise.
