Funding, open interest and mark price are point-in-time (as of 00:00 UTC), not daily figures.

Bitcoin traders showed moderate optimism with an 8.4% annualized funding rate. More traders overall were betting on prices going up than down (1.36:1 ratio). The largest traders showed much more bullish confidence (1.88:1 ratio) than the average trader. When looking at aggressive buying versus aggressive selling, sellers had a slight edge (taker buy/sell ratio of 0.95). Ethereum traders were more bullish than Bitcoin, with a 2.6:1 long/short ratio, though they also showed slight selling pressure. Overall market breadth was almost exactly even (49% up), signaling neutral sentiment with a hint of caution.

Asian technology stocks rallied: South Korea's SK Hynix and Samsung Electronics rose 2–4%, with a leveraged Samsung tracker jumping 7%. US semiconductor equipment makers (Applied Materials +6%, Corning Glass +6%) also gained strongly, likely supporting the regional chipmaker recovery. Oil prices fell sharply (WTI down 4.4%, Brent down 2.9%), a potential sign of demand concerns.

Every term used today, in plain words

Bearish — Sentiment or outlook that expects prices to fall. A bearish trader or market believes prices are likely to go down.

Bullish — Sentiment or outlook that expects prices to rise. A bullish trader or market believes prices are likely to go up.

Collateral — Assets put up as security for a loan or credit facility. If the borrower defaults, the lender can take the collateral.

Funding rate — The cost traders pay to hold long positions in a futures contract. Expressed as a percentage per 8-hour period. Higher rates mean traders are more bullish; negative rates mean they're bearish and short-sellers are getting paid.

Leverage — Borrowing money to trade larger amounts than your own capital. A 2x leverage lets you trade with double your money but doubles both gains and losses.

Long — A bet that the price will go up. A trader holding a long position profits if the price rises.

Long/short ratio — The ratio of traders betting up (long) to traders betting down (short). A 1.5:1 ratio means 50% more traders are bullish than bearish.

Market breadth — The percentage of all coins trading on an exchange that went up on the day. 49% means about half went up and half went down — a neutral signal. Higher percentages (e.g., 70%) suggest broad bullish momentum.

Open interest — The total amount of money bet on price moves in futures contracts. Higher open interest means more traders are active in the market; rapid increases or decreases can signal shifting sentiment.

Short — A bet that the price will go down. A trader holding a short position profits if the price falls.

Taker buy/sell ratio — The ratio of aggressive buyers to aggressive sellers in a futures market. Above 1.0 means more aggressive buying; below 1.0 means more aggressive selling.

Top-trader long/short ratio — The ratio of long to short bets among the largest traders (usually the top 0.1% by account size). Shows what the biggest money is doing, separate from the average trader.
