All five major exchanges (Binance, Bybit, OKX, Bitget, Gate) reported Bitcoin closing between $86,435–$86,486 and Ethereum between $2,724–$2,726, showing strong price agreement. Binance led trading volume with $5.74 billion in Bitcoin and $3.45 billion in Ethereum, followed by OKX with $2.91 billion and $2.71 billion respectively.

02 · POSITIONING

How traders were leaning

Funding shows which side is paying to hold its position (positive = longs pay shorts). Open interest is how much money is in open bets; its change over the day shows money coming in or out. Long/short is how many accounts lean each way. Top L/S is the ratio among the largest traders. Taker B/S is the buy-to-sell ratio of market orders.

Funding, open interest and mark price are point-in-time (as of 00:00 UTC), not daily figures.

Bitcoin funding stayed elevated at 8.2% annualized, signaling traders remained bullish and willing to pay to hold long positions. Ethereum's funding was higher at 10.7%, suggesting even more leverage betting on continued gains. Open interest grew modestly on both coins—Bitcoin traders added positions at an 1.22 long-to-short ratio (accounts), though the largest traders were more extreme at 1.85-to-1 long. Ethereum's account ratio was 2.86-to-1 long, indicating retail traders heavily favored upside. Taker volume (the most aggressive buying/selling) for Bitcoin showed 0.93 more selling than buying—a sign that market-takers were pressing downside slightly despite price gains. Ethereum saw nearly balanced taker activity at 1.01, meaning buy and sell aggression were roughly equal. Overall market breadth was strong at 65.9% of Binance perpetual contracts trading higher on the day.

All major equity cash markets—New York, Korea, Hong Kong, and China—were closed on Sunday, October 4th. Stock-linked perpetual contracts on Binance Futures showed mixed performance: Korean semiconductor makers drifted modestly (SK Hynix +0.4%, Samsung +0.3%), Hong Kong stocks including Tencent (+1.1%) and Zhongji Innolight (+1.3%) moved slightly higher, and Chinese micro-cap names were essentially flat. These perp moves reflect weekend positioning shifts and technical factors rather than cash-market news.

REST OF THE WEEK

Wed 07 Oct	FOMC Meeting Minutes	18:00
Wed 07 Oct	FOMC Minutes October 2026	18:00

Every term used today, in plain words

Annualized funding rate — The yearly cost for traders to hold long or short positions in perpetual futures, expressed as a percentage. Higher rates incentivize traders to close long bets or open short ones.

Basis points — One basis point equals 1/100th of a percent (0.01%). Used to describe small percentage changes.

Breadth — The percentage of all traded assets that moved upward on a given day. Higher breadth indicates broad-based strength; lower breadth indicates weakness concentrated in a few assets.

ETF — Exchange-Traded Fund — a security that tracks the price of Bitcoin (or another asset), bought and sold on regular stock exchanges like the New York Stock Exchange. Institutions often use spot Bitcoin ETFs instead of holding Bitcoin directly.

Fear and Greed Index — A sentiment gauge ranging from 0 (Extreme Fear) to 100 (Extreme Greed) that measures market psychology by combining price volatility, trading volume, dominance, and social media trends.

Funding rate — The periodic interest payment between traders holding long positions and those holding short positions in perpetual futures contracts. Positive rates mean long holders pay short holders; negative rates are the reverse.

Long position — A bet that a cryptocurrency's price will rise; the trader owns or is obligated to buy the asset.

Long-to-short ratio — The proportion of traders betting on price increases (long) versus price decreases (short). A ratio of 1.2 means 20% more traders are betting up than down.

Mark price — The reference price used by a futures exchange to calculate gains and losses on open positions. It prevents traders from exploiting price differences between the futures contract and the underlying spot market.

Open interest — The total dollar value of all unsettled futures contracts on an exchange. Rising open interest shows traders adding bets; falling open interest shows traders closing positions.

Open-interest change — The day-over-day increase or decrease in the total dollar value of open futures contracts, indicating whether traders are collectively adding or reducing leverage.

Perpetual futures (perps) — A type of futures contract with no expiration date. Traders can hold positions indefinitely by paying periodic funding fees to the opposing side.

Short position — A bet that a cryptocurrency's price will fall; the trader owes or is obligated to sell the asset.

Taker buy/sell ratio — A measure of aggressive buying versus aggressive selling. A ratio above 1.0 means more traders are aggressively buying; below 1.0 means more are aggressively selling.

Top-trader long/short ratio — The proportion of the largest traders betting on price increases versus decreases. Often more predictive of short-term moves than the overall account ratio.

Volume — The total dollar amount (or coin amount) of a cryptocurrency traded on a given day across all exchanges.
