What every venue's price and volume did

The same two contracts on every exchange, for this UTC day. When the prices line up, nothing unusual is happening; a gap or a big volume difference is worth noticing.

How traders were leaning

Funding shows which side is paying to hold its position (positive = longs pay shorts). Open interest is how much money is in open bets; its change over the day shows money coming in or out. Long/short is how many accounts lean each way.

Binance	+1.4%	$5.83B	—	2.98	$2,514.29
Gate	+5.9%	$3.14B	—	—	$2,514.11

Funding, open interest and mark price are point-in-time (as of 00:00 UTC), not daily figures.

Traders remained bullish with positive funding rates ranging from 2.2% to 11% annualized across venues. Open interest was stable, and long-side positioning dominated on both BTC and ETH — Binance's long-to-short ratio hit 1.66 for Bitcoin and 2.98 for Ethereum, showing heavy long skew. This positioning reflects confidence but also means leverage is elevated.

Asian semiconductor stocks fell sharply in their morning sessions on September 14. South Korean markets (KRX, open 00:00–06:30 UTC) sold off: KOSPI 200 ETF dropped 4.31%, SK Hynix fell 2.18%, and Samsung lost 1.33%. Hong Kong markets (HKEX, 01:30–08:00 UTC) followed: chip maker Zhongji Innolight tumbled 6.36%, and CSOP SK Hynix 2x fell 3.98%. Chinese markets (open 01:30–07:00 UTC) were mixed: Unitree Robotics gained 1.19% but CXMT fell 1.91%. The pattern matched the day's AI-slowdown narrative — as tech leaders called for caution in AI development, investors dumped semiconductor exposure. Traditional US markets also declined: S&P 500 down 0.45%, Nasdaq down 0.48%.

Trump hints Iran war could end, boosting risk appetite and crypto prices toward $80k

Senate Clarity Act vote scheduled Tuesday; White House signals confidence, but state AGs and Democrats push back

On September 14, news emerged that the Senate will vote on the Clarity Act (crypto market-structure bill) on Tuesday, September 16. The White House crypto adviser said he felt 'very good' about prospects after Trump endorsed stronger ethics rules as a compromise. However, 17 bipartisan state attorneys general urged the Senate to reject the bill, citing concerns it would weaken state oversight of securities fraud and scams.

AI industry leaders call for AI slowdown; chip stocks plunge as investors flee semiconductor sector

OpenAI's Sam Altman, Anthropic, and others publicly called for the AI industry to slow down AI capability development and implement stronger safety measures. The narrative triggered a sell-off in semiconductor stocks globally: Nvidia, Intel, AMD all fell; in Asia, SK Hynix dropped 2.18%, Samsung fell 1.33%, and Zhongji Innolight crashed 6.36%. Bitcoin's gain suggests traders view crypto as a hedge against AI regulation risk or see geopolitical safety as the bigger driver.

REGULATION AND POLICY

SEC Chair Atkins backs Clarity Act; says agency will regulate crypto regardless of vote outcome

SEC Chair Gary Gensler's successor signaled that crypto issuance, transfer-agent rules, and custody reform will form the backbone of the agency's regulatory push, whether or not the Clarity Act passes. This suggests long-term regulatory pressure on the industry is locked in.

Senator Lummis: Democrats 'won't quit asking for more' on Clarity Act — negotiation fatigue sets in Cynthia Lummis, a top Republican negotiator on the Clarity Act, said she has reached her limit on revisions after five years of work. Democrats continue to push for changes even as the Senate heads toward a vote, suggesting the bill's path remains uncertain despite recent optimism.

Eight banking trade groups escalate push for stricter stablecoin reward limits

Major US bank associations demanded tighter caps on stablecoin yield, arguing that high rewards divert deposits from traditional banks. This keeps alive the banks-versus-crypto dispute as the Senate prepares to vote on Clarity Act provisions affecting stablecoins.

Trump's ethics concession strengthens Clarity Act prospects — bipartisan state AGs still oppose

President Trump agreed to tougher ethics rules for the bill, a compromise that won GOP support. However, 17 state attorneys general (D+R) filed a letter opposing the bill, worried it strips states of power to prosecute crypto-related fraud and scams. The vote remains genuinely uncertain.

07 · GLOSSARY

Every term used today, in plain words

Basis points — One hundredth of one percent. If funding rate is 0.01% (0.0001 raw), that is 1 basis point per day.

Caveman summary — A simple, jargon-free explanation of the day's events using everyday words, written for someone with no finance background.

Funding rate — A periodic payment between long and short traders on a futures exchange. Positive funding means longs pay shorts (bullish signal of overheating); negative funding means shorts pay longs (bearish signal). Annualized funding shows what an annual rate would be if daily funding stayed constant.

Long-to-short ratio (long/short ratio) — The proportion of traders betting price will go UP (long) versus DOWN (short). A ratio above 1 means more longs than shorts. Very high ratios (like 2.98 for ETH) signal extreme long leverage and risk of sudden liquidation if price reverses.

Mark price — The 'true' price of a futures contract, used to calculate funding payments and prevent manipulation. It usually tracks spot price but may diverge slightly.

Open interest (OI) — The total amount of unsettled contracts (in coins or dollars) on an exchange. Rising OI = traders adding leverage and conviction; falling OI = positions closing. A stable or rising OI at higher prices signals strong bullish positioning.

Spot market — The market where you buy or sell crypto for immediate delivery (you own it outright). Differs from futures, where you bet on price without owning the asset.

Treasury company (Bitcoin treasury, corporate Bitcoin holder) — A publicly traded company (e.g., Strive, Strategy, Bitmine) that holds significant Bitcoin or Ethereum as a long-term investment, similar to how companies hold cash reserves. Announcements of treasury purchases or sales move markets.

Venue (exchange) — A cryptocurrency trading platform where futures are bought and sold (e.g., Binance, Bybit, OKX, Bitget, Gate.io).

Vesting — A lock-up period on crypto tokens or shares. A vested amount cannot be sold until the lock-up ends. Used to align incentives and prevent sudden dumps.
